Dear Jessica,

I met you at the Karratha airline meeting. I was the one who started sobbing (sorry again about that) it's just such an emotional thing when you know you have to get to Perth for an urgent meeting or whatever and you have no idea how you will find, in my case $1700 for a day trip to Perth. So three days off to do the trip over three days but it's still $660.00.

Although now there is accommodation and food and hire car it's probably just the same as forking out $1700.00. The trip I am talking about is costing over $2500 for four of us.

A recent trip for a MRI was paid for by PATS. But they don't pay for my foster children and we have no extended family to care for them. That's another $1300!

I can't understand how a same day return flight has to be $1700 or if there is a seat going regardless of last minute or not why leave it empty. Why not special them out? I know you don't have the answers but somehow we have to resolve this problem.

Thanks for your time

Dianne Moar
