

HOUSING — LANDSLIDE RISK — MIRA MAR

891. Mr P.J. RUNDLE to the Minister for Lands:

I have a supplementary question. I want to confirm the detail that the question was sent at 9.41 am to the minister's chief of staff this morning. Further to that, is there any particular detail on the determination of the houses that the minister wanted to voluntarily acquire, and is there any right of appeal for someone —

The SPEAKER: That is the question. It has to be a short, sharp question for a supplementary question, not a commentary about when you did or did not send a question.

Mr J.N. CAREY replied:

The homes that are affected are already known on the public record. As I said, the Great Southern Development Commission assisted to help to identify the landowners, and the Department of Planning, Lands and Heritage has been undertaking those negotiations. Again, I will say this: any fair and reasonable person would agree with my summary that the government's approach has been very transparent and that for us to offer people's own reports to be commissioned at our cost is a very fair process.
