

I can't express how happy I am that there is a climate action movement being taken seriously in our schools!

Here are my suggestions:

1. Employ more DOE-wide sustainability staff to help schools implement sustainability initiatives
2. Provide funding support to schools to enable them to participate in programs like ClimateClever where they can accurately measure their carbon emissions, identify actions, track progress and compare with others
3. Provide more funding to support the implementation of low carbon actions that improve the operational performance of schools, such as solar, energy and water efficiency and waste reduction in schools.
