It is with considerable concern that I learned about the review into the RSPCA WA. This organisation has a unique position in our community and indeed in the wider world. They show considerable care and humanity in a world where some people either by indifference or brutality cause intense suffering to helpless creatures. It would appear that in parts of our society which sees itself as superior to other species and only concerns itself with the me -me syndrome the attack on the RSPCA would suggest very sinister underhand motivations.

I have spoken to other people concerning this review and the overall reaction has been one of horror at the threat to an organisation which works so hard and tirelessly with staff and volunteers to make a difference.

Haven't we seen enough of terrorism, stupidity, guns and massacres.

I would ask the committee what their motive for is for bringing this inquiry in the first place but I think we all know the answer to that.
